

learn

What keeps healthy kids and teens healthy? Every week FCD Prevention Specialists visit dozens of different schools to engage hundreds of students in prevention education and learning across the globe. As we talk with kids, their families and their schools, we learn plenty.

FCD finds that healthy kids:

- are connected to family, school and friends
- contribute to and have fun in their communities, and
- very often make the healthy decision not to use alcohol or other drugs.

The more we talk with students, parents and teachers worldwide, the more we find there is to learn.

To learn more with us, check out the latest student substance abuse prevention news, research and information through the links above.

